SYNOPSIS

What if everything we've been told about cancer isn't the whole story?

Cancer touches nearly every corner of the world. Behind every diagnosis is a family searching for answers, hope and more time.

Born from personal loss, Save Your Life follows a grieving daughter's seventeen-year journey across the globe in search of answers. What begins as an attempt to understand the cancer that devastated her own family leads to doctors, researchers and survivors whose experiences challenge conventional thinking. She discovers how awareness is key to making fully informed choices about our own lives.

Her search uncovers treatments outside the mainstream, overlooked research and potentially life-saving work that never reached the public. What emerges is a deeply human story about how far someone will go when they believe the truth is being concealed. The further she goes, the more she uncovers a story far bigger than her own.

G. Edward Griffin is a writer and documentary film producer listed in Who's Who in America, known for researching difficult subjects and presenting them in clear terms. His books include The Creature from Jekyll Island, on the Federal Reserve, and World without Cancer. A graduate of the University of Michigan and a Telly Award recipient for television production, he is President of American Media, Founder and President of The Cancer Cure Foundation and Freedom Force International, and Chairman of Red Pill Expo.

Dr. Mark M. Ghalili, DO

Interviewed in 2026

Dr. Mark M. Ghalili, DO, is the founder of Regenerative Medicine LA, a regenerative and integrative medicine practice in Los Angeles. Born and raised in the city, he studied at the University of California, Irvine, earned his medical degree at Western University of Health Sciences, and completed his internal medicine residency at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. In 2016 a severe reaction to a prescribed antibiotic left him in a wheelchair for months, and his recovery shaped his focus on finding the underlying causes of chronic illness.

ABOUT THE FILMMAKER

Melanie Marden

Melanie Marden has always brought an undeniable energy to everything she does. A best-selling author, award-winning actress turned activist, and global keynote speaker, she turned personal loss into purpose after losing her mother to brain cancer in 2008. Her search for answers took her around the world, speaking with doctors, researchers and survivors. That journey became the documentary Save Your Life and her best-selling book of the same name. It helped shape her mission to empower others to become "the CEO of their well-being."

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

Seventeen years, one question

> In 2008 I lost my mother to brain cancer. What I remember most from that year isn't the treatment or the hospitals. It's the questions: the ones I asked and couldn't get a straight answer to, and the ones I didn't know to ask until much later, when it was already too late to matter.
>
> I was acting in Hollywood at the time. I had a career I'd worked years for. And I found I couldn't go back to it, because I couldn't stop asking.
>
> I never planned to make a documentary. I planned to find something out. The film is what happened while I was looking.
